While anyone can look up the gifts online, this book sets itself apart with incredible information. Not only is it theologically accurate but they took time to do actual studies on today's people in different age groups nonetheless. It includes great volunteer positions in the church for your gift as well as work options. Also includes self-scoring for each gift and aspect of the gifts. I love how easy the concepts are to understand and the thought and research behind everything. Clearly this is important stuff I've been missing out on! You need to find your gift and this is the book to do it with

This is an interesting treatise. It may be somewhat helpful for learning about some of the things that may be characteristics of others. Unfortunately, I think it would be more helpful if the descriptions were not associated with each of the giftings so that one could take the tests without being influenced by the type of gifting being tested. In other words, if the questions were random, the reader would possibly be less influenced by "desiring to be" and may be able to answer more objectively.

This is really an excellent book especially if you have recently taken a spiritual assessment and you would like to go more in depth about the characteristics and possible roles associated with your spiritual gift (s). It allows the reader to not only see what work they can pursue in ministry but what they typically gravitate to career wise and for me it was spot on. I shared this book with others members of my small group class at my church.

Biblically based. Not really a personality typing kind of book, but rather strengths we all have and the degrees with which they work in our lives.. It helps one to understand not only themselves but others and especially helpful in giving much needed grace on both ends. Highly recommend.

This book is one of the best books written on the subject of your God given gifts. I have read a number of them. "Speaking of Love," by the Kendalls is also good. Taken from Scripture, our gifts are what motivate us. While we can minister in gifts that are not our main ones as the need arises, we will be the most happy if we know our gifts and base our career and ministry choices on the activities which most strongly motivate us. For example my motivational or God given gifts are that of exhorter or encourager and teacher. This being the case I enjoy writing, teaching a Bible study at the local jail and counseling with and praying for the female inmates I work with. Read this well written, informative book and find out your gifts.

This book is a must for individual or small group study, every parent & every employer or Volunteer coordinator should be on their required reading list! I have walked through it with two small groups at my church now! Truth rooted in the word with a deeper understanding of your purpose on this earth, why you do what you do, and what jobs & Volunteer work you'll be more effective & fulfilled in...God, will always give you what you need when u are lacking in strengths, but it is eye-opening to understand what part of the body of Christ you were meant to be from day 1! Love this read-always points back to scripture, really easy read!

We are using this book for a class - and learning to utilize our gifts for His purposes. Sadly, the book does not include the inventory assessment, it must be purchased separately, which adds to the expense. Difficult to understand why the book includes the full youth questionnaire, but not the adult questionnaire.

I have not had an opportunity to read much of the book. What I have read thus far is very informative as well as easy to read and get understanding!
