For over 35 years, School Zone has been an innovator in children's educational products. School Zone creates a wide range of educational resources for every curriculum.

I originally bought the 'Flashkids' Three Letter Word set which my grandson enjoys. I bought the Schoolzone set as an extra set for him to have at home. It was a dollar cheaper and I figured there couldn't be a lot of difference between the two sets. They are different in important ways - to me - and since I've had the benefit of seeing the two sets side by side, this is what I will say. The Flashkids set: * The quality of the card is really good. The cards are heavy and glossy on both side like good playing cards * There are 28 words in the set which is a good number for young children * The illustrations are nicer - this is subjective, of course * One side has a picture of the object, e.g.

pen, with small letters - p e n underneath printed in black. The reverse sides are bright, solid colours - one colour per word - with the letters printed in the center, identical to the front letters but larger and printed in white. They're very clear. The child can learn by seeing the object with the letters underneath and then move on to seeing only the letters on the reverse side and learn the word without the picture prompt. The Schoolzone set:* The quality feels cheap like simple card stock - okay the set is cheap, but so is the Flashkids set.* There are 17 words on the front sides, and obviously an equal number of different words on the reverse sides.* The illustrations on the main side are colourful nouns and the letters are clear* The reverse side has another illustration in a couple of shades of blue on white, and it's not glossy - it's an adjective which relates to the front side e.g. the front of one set of cards spells 'hen', and the reverse side has what's supposed to be an overweight chicken, and the word below is 'fat'. I use the cards with a three year old and think that having the same word on the front and back is better reinforcement to learn that particular word. Perhaps these are better for an older child who is learning the difference between nouns and adjectives.* There is no option for the child to learn the word without the picture prompt Overall, I was very pleased with the quality and attractiveness of the Flashkids set and the choice of words to be learned, and disappointed with the Schoolzone set. If I'd got the Schoolzone set first, I think I would still have been disappointed with it because they feel cheap (I know, they are cheap), and some of the adjectives/pronouns don't feel intuitive in any way, e.g. tin dog - what kid these days has ever seen a tin dog? I've never seen a tin dog. For my purpose, I was not interested in adjectives because my grandboy is only three, and my recommendation, if your objective is just to work on some basic words, is to get the Flashkids cards.

I just got this card pack yesterday and our 2 yr old loves it. I can, even after a day of use, see her making a little connection with the pictures and letters. She already asks for them. Do not leave these out, your child may bend them. I suggest encouraging your child to name the letters and sound out the words. Very impressed with them and will re-review them again to determine their impact. Research: I had considered numbers but I felt reading would have a greater effect since when we read at night, we can then start understanding words and this is far more effective in my mind for communication. Don't worry, I'll encourage math too - anything that makes her nerdy is alright by me. Archaeology? Geology? Those are next coming- as well as inch thick glasses...

I tutor poor first grade readers. Two of my boys did not know any words at all and sometimes could not identify all the alphabet if it was out of order. These flash cards were a breakthrough. OMG, now they cannot get enough and are excited to come to their tutoring session. YAY, they LOVE discovering the words. Thank you.

Was a gift for one of my daycare children at "Beautiful Minds Learn & Play Toddler Preschool " and child & parent both love it.

Fantastic learning tool. It brings a bit of tension and surprise as kids piece the cute pictures together for the first few times. Then the letters get associated with each picture. Before you know it, they are spelling accidentally. Very cool way to implant knowledge in your little ones' heads without much effort or boring drills. Just use it often enough and it will help. This company (and others linked via product pages) makes a bunch of cheap and useful card packs. I combine them so that the kids do not get bored. Perfect for spending time with your little loved ones.

My niece loves them!

Best cards ever! Great quality and very helpful with teaching kids to spell 3 letter words.

These are great! Nice, sturdy cards that have held up nicely. My little one loves to look at these and the words and photos are easy for him to memorize. Great buy, great learning tool!
