Zion National Park (Images Of America: Utah)

Synopsis

On July 31, 1909, Pres. William Howard Taft authorized the creation of Mukuntuweap National Monument in southern Utah. Encompassing miles of rugged mountain peaks towering above the Virgin River, the national monument was renamed Zion and designated as a national park in 1919. The area, originally inhabited by Native Americans, was settled by Mormon pioneers in the early 1860s. As the beauty of the region gained national fame, roads were constructed, tourist accommodations were established, and from 1927 to 1930, the Zion-Mount Carmel Tunnel, a 5,613-foot-long engineering wonder, was constructed. Recognized around the world for its geologic, scenic, and historic value, Zion, Utah's first national park, draws millions of visitors each year.

Article Title: "Zion" provides look at early settlers of national park area
Author: Nicole Warburton
Date: 11/2/2008
Tiffany Taylor's new book, "Zion National Park," is not meant for readers curious only about the park's monuments, weather and topography. Instead, the book is more likely to appeal to area residents and historians because it focuses on the lives of Zion's early pioneer settlers and visually chronicles how the park has changed over the past century. At times, details in "Zion National Park" are a little muddy, but it's still an informative read. More than 200 black-and-white photographs dot the book's pages and showcase moments such as the construction of various trails, the park's dedication ceremony and also life on nearby farms.

Many of the images were by William L. Crawford, an avid photographer who lived and farmed near Zion during the early 1900s. Other pictures were taken by people like Denise H. Williams and Flora Anderson, who had family ties to the park. The author also contributed some of her own images to the book. She grew up in Orem, and her grandfather was a seasonal park ranger at Zion. Copies of "Zion National Park" will be sold beginning Monday. The book can be obtained online, at local bookstores, or through Arcadia Publishing at arcadiapublishing.com. It is part of an ongoing series by Arcadia titled "Images of America" and comes with a set of 15 postcards featuring images from the book.

Title: Books: Historic looks at Zion National Park
Author: Staff Writer
Publisher: The Salt Lake Tribune
Date: 12/23/2008

Two illustrated photo books of Zion National Park are out just in time for Utah's first national park to celebrate its 100th anniversary in 2009. The most extensive is Images of America Zion National Park written by Tiffany Taylor, who received a history degree from Brigham Young University. Published by Arcadia, this 128-page softcover book sells for $21.99. It contains more than 200 images chronicling the history of the park from its earliest Native American inhabitants to the post-World War II tourist boom. The vintage photographs are organized into four chapters to tell Zion's story. A companion volume, which sells for $7.99, features 15 historic postcards that also provide an early look at Zion.

Title: Author of new Zion book available to meet
Author: Staff Writer

A new book on Zion National Park featuring over 200 historical photographs has been selling well at a Springdale bookstore and anyone interested in meeting the author will have the chance tonight. The book, called Zion National Park by Tiffany Taylor, covers the history of the park from the park's earliest Native American inhabitants through World War II. Therese Feinauer, owner of Sundancer Books, LLC, said many local residents have been purchasing the book, which is the first book with that number of photographs from both private and public collections. Feinauer said the book is a great compliment to the park's centennial which is next year. "A lot of (people) locally are purchasing it for their kids or grandkids," she said. "What's really neat about it is you have this collection of historical photographs for yourself." Taylor is a Utah native, received a history degree from Brigham Young University and is a graduate student in the historical administration program at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston. Taylor's book, by Arcadia Publishing which specializes in local history books, is dedicated to her grandfather, Hal. L. Taylor, who was a seasonal park ranger at Zion National Park. Feinauer said Taylor also had a great aunt, Elsa Ruesch, who was the secretary to one of the park's superintendents. Some of the images in the book were provided by local residents J.L. Crawford and Nellie Ballard. In the book, part of the Images of America series, there is a group of 15 postcards. The Postcards of America series, are also available for sale. Taylor will be at Sundancer Books this evening from 5 to 7 p.m. for a book signing. Sundancer Books is located at 975 Zion Park Boulevard, Springdale. For more information, contact the book store at 772-3400.

Utah native Tiffany Taylor is a graduate student in the historical administration program at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston, Illinois. She received a history degree from Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, and has worked for the National Park Service at the Natchez National Historical Park in Natchez, Mississippi. The photographs in this book have been drawn from a number of private and public collections for the purpose of documenting the history of the people and places of Zion National Park.

The photographs in this book are a fascinating compilation of historic images of Zion National Park. I had seen some of these images previously in different locations in the Park and around the town of Springdale. To see them together in one volume is really interesting and informative. I also enjoyed the personal vignettes of early settlers and others involved in the evolution of Zion National Park. It is an awe-inspiring place to visit and explore. My family and I have been going there for over thirty years and find something different and exciting each time we visit. This book has increased our knowledge and appreciation of Zion National Park and the neighboring town of Springdale.

This was a gift to a local of the area. He loved hearing about all the work that was done to the Park. He loved it!
