Lorraine Farrelly is an architect and teaches undergraduate and postgraduate courses at the Portsmouth School of Architecture. Her previous books include Drawing for Urban Design (Laurence King, 2011). Rachael Brown is a senior lecturer at Portsmouth School of Architecture. Before this, she worked as an interior designer for 15 years.

Very practical information but a very dry read with meh images.

I have read this entire book and I must say it is such a helpful book for interior designers. I love the images in the book that give you tips on sketching styles, presentation of materials, understanding the properties of materials....typical things an interior designer should know. I can definitely see myself referencing this book throughout my interior design profession. It's very informative and worth the read.

Amazing Book!!!

Gave as gift for a new designer, big hit!
